No Indictments In Howard County Vat Dynamiting

Grand Jury Makes Only One Report and Ignores This Angle.

MANY INDICTMENTS

Inquisitorial Body Makes No Finding and Prisoner Released.

NASHVILLE, Ark., August 31.—Ignoring all charges in the dynamiting of dipping vats in Howard county's anti-dipping war, the grand jury Friday submitted 43 indictments to the circuit court in its first and only report since it was empaneled Monday by Judge Isbell.

Twenty-two felony and 21 misdemeanor indictments were included in the report. The cases are scheduled for trial during the present term of Howard circuit court with the criminal docket opening on Monday. Majority of the indictments charge violations of liquor laws, adding to the already heavy docket of similar charges.

The grand jury, in probing blasting of dipping vats in protest to the tick eradication program under way in Arkansas failed to report a true bill in the investigation and ordered Lee Waters, young farmer, released on charges in connection with a recent dynamiting.

Makes New Record for Solo Flying

Fliers Find Plane Wrapped Around Tree With Pilot Dead.

CLEVELAND, August 31.—(AP)—Flying solo and resisting the demands of a tired body for rest, Thomas Reid fell asleep at the controls of his plane after establishing a record for solo endurance flying early today and crashed to earth. He died earning hourly bonuses for a honeymoon with his bride a few days.

Reid took off at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. For 37 hours he had droned monotonously over the airport, fighting the sleep-impeiling hum of his motors and the physical strain of flying. A few seconds after one o'clock this morning he made a new record of 37:56:36 continuous flying without refueling. Then he set out to fly as long as fuel, motor and man power lasted. The promise of $100 an hour as a bonus, to be presented his bride in Downey, Cal., spurred him on. For two hours the cruising lights of his plane circled the airport as timers below clocked his time. Then the sound of his motor faded away.

Three hours passed and the lights were not seen again. Just at day-light pilots Phil Butler and Dale Dryer climbed into a plane, sky clear, and went to hunt for the missing pilot. Two miles away they saw the wreckage of his plane, wrapped around the trunk of a tree, Reid's body lying 25 feet away.

Miss Harris, who conducts a large class of juvenile dance students every winter in Hope, is also well known for her excellent amateur revues presented here and at Texarkana. Her students usually appear in two public events at the Saenger theatre during the season.

Nebraska Sees First Real Arkansas Melon

In the Omaha Bee of a few days since appeared a picture of one of these 107-pound Hope melons, coupled with the announcement that it "was Arkansas' largest" for the year.

The melon was sent by A. C. Monte to Trimble Bros., a firm with whom the local man does business. The melon was loaned to an Omaha grocer for display purposes and came near blocking traffic in that particular block.

However, Mr. Monte strenuously denies that he said it was the season's largest. "Why should I," he inquired, "when everybody who can read knows the largest this year will be biggest in the history of melon growing? If a little knot like that causes any comment in the Nebraska village I'll send 'em a real melon one of these days and start a riot in the prairie community."

Fourth Sentenced In Bank Robbery

Former Pine Bluff City Attorney To Go To Penitentiary.

PINE BLUFF, August 31.—(AP)—Former city attorney Ralph Reed was formally sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary today by Circuit Judge Parham for being an accessory to the robbery of the People's Bank & Trust Company in April last. Reed was convicted last week.

Reed will be placed in "the walls" at Little Rock this afternoon, officials said. He is the fourth to be convicted in connection with the robbery which netted the bandits $20,057.00. The three already sentenced are serving 14 year terms.

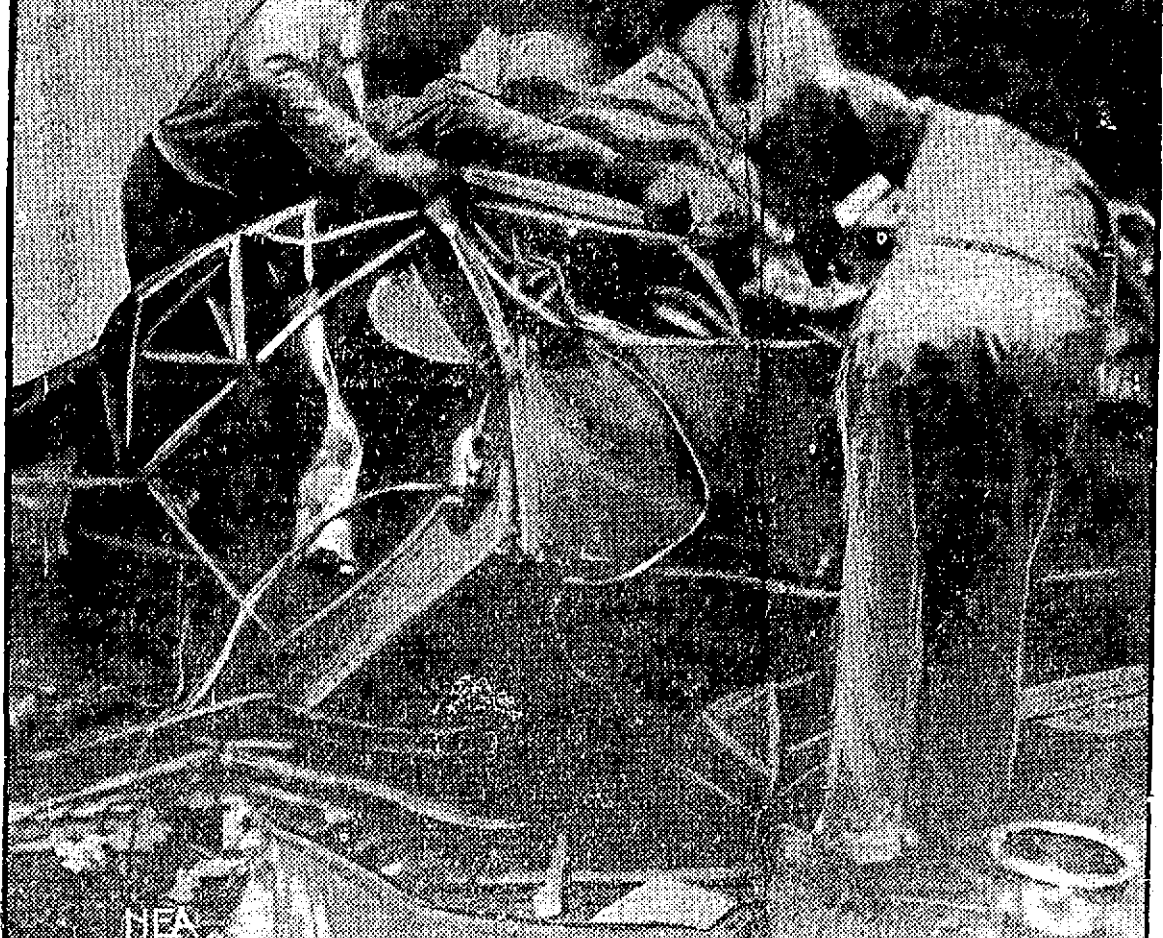

Many Miners Trapped In Mine Explosion

RENTON, Pa., August 31.—(AP)—More than 300 miners escaped and 12 are known seriously injured as result of an explosion in the Renton mines early today. The injured were taken to a hospital in Kensington where they were said to be in a serious condition.

Hazards of Modern-Day Liquor Now Recognized

COLUMBUS, O., August 31.—The industrial commission of Ohio now officially recognizes hazards of attempting to enforce prohibition by drinking bootleg liquor. The commission has allowed E. J. Bleeks, under-cover dry agent, workmen's compensation because he drank some evidence liquor and became sick, partially blind and was incapacitated for almost two months.

World-Famous Woman Flyer's Plane Falls Through Roof

This tangled mass of wreckage was all that was left of Lady Mary Heath's airplane after the famous English aviatrix crashed through the roof of a factory building in Cleveland. Erwin Kirk, a mechanic flying with Lady Heath, jumped shortly before the plane hit the roof and escaped with minor injuries. Lady Heath received a fractured skull, and other serious injuries. She was the first woman to fly from Cape Town, Africa, to Cairo, Egypt, and thence to London. She came to Cleveland to take part in the National Air Races.

Zeppelin Ready for Next Flight

Dirigible Off Saturday Night for Hop To Homeland.

WASHINGTON, August 31.—(AP)—Naval authorities today advised authorities at the Lakehurst naval station that State authorities might be permitted to attach the Graf Zeppelin on the complaint of Otto Hillig, who asserts he was denied passage on the round-the-world flight of the ship and asks $125,000 damage, only if it were removed from the hangar before sailing time tonight.

The opinion was forwarded only after it was decided that the naval station land was not vested in the United States.

LAKEHURST, N. J., August 31.—(AP)—Preparations were going forward today to send the round-the-world dirigible Graf Zeppelin into the air at midnight for the trip to its home port at Friedrichshafen. 17 passengers, 3,300 pounds of freight and a quantity of mail will be aboard the big ship as it starts its fifth flight across the Atlantic.

Other Endurance Fliers Seek Share of Cash

METROPOLITAN Airport, Los Angeles, August 31.—(AP)—Seeking a victor's share of the $10,000 prize offered for a non-stop flight to Cleveland from Los Angeles, Major John Wood and Captain Roscoe Turner are speeding their nonstop eastward today. They have the mark of 13:51:10, set by Lee Schoenhair, to shoot at. Lt. Brown, scheduled to take off this morning, postponed his flight after Turner and Wood were under way.

Coast Guard Cutter Rescues Norwegian Crew

WASHINGTON, August 31.—(AP)—Coast guard headquarters was notified today by the coast guard cutter Northland that she had picked up the entire crew of the Norwegian ship Elisla sunk off Cape Villuda, Siberia, August 10. The crew of 15 men were found on Dionides Island, Alaska, which the shipwrecked men reached after rowing 400 miles in an open boat.

Bells the Spanish Padres Cast Still Call the Faithful to Reverent Worship

VICTORIA, Tex., Aug. 31.—The search for the bells has ended in the thickets of mesquite and cacti southwest of this old Texas town.

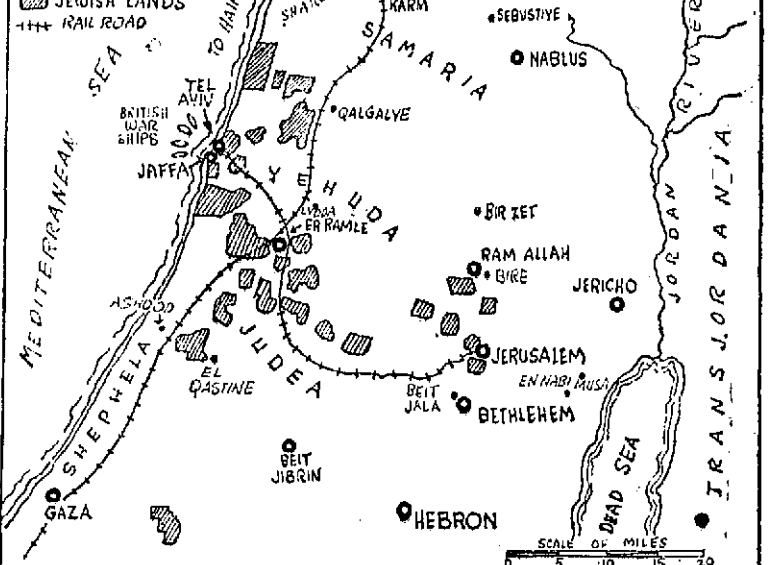

There were four great bells in the beginning, four crude bronze bells that hung in the old Spanish mission at Refugio. They had been hung there in 1793 when the Spaniards brought the sword and cross to Texas.

The Indians thought they were the voice of the white man's God. They called the faithful to worship. They tolled the gladness of the first births in that wilderness settlement. They tolled the sorrow of its deaths. Their bronze voices thundered warning of the Indian raids. In them, so ran the people's legend, was the voice of this new land of the Texas.

No man knew whence came these bells. Perhaps the priests cast them. Perhaps they were made in Nuevo Santander, the present Tamaulipas.

Church Destroyed
The bells tolled the passing of the years and the scene changed white men from the North, men with blue eyes and fair skins, came into the wilderness. War came, the war of Texas' liberation. The Mexicans fled south. The priests returned, carrying with them two of the bells. The church, the Mission of Our Lady of Refuge, was destroyed by General Urrea's artillery. The bells disappeared.

Scenes of Strife in Holy Land

Scenes of Sanguine fighting between Jews and Arabs in Palestine are indicated in this map. The worst disorders have occurred at Jerusalem and Hebron, in the lower part of the map, and at Jaffa, on the seacoast, where British warships have been concentrated. Arabian tribesmen were reported ready to cross the Transjordan border, extreme right. Note the numerous purely Arabian settlements that are located near large cities where the two races are intermingled.

OTHER RAIDS FEARED

Arabs Massing for Attacks On Jewish Quarters In Country.

JERUSALEM, August 31.—(AP)—The number of known dead in Thursday's Arab attack on the Jewish quarters in Safed, Galilee town, was increased today to 20 and the wounded to 30. It is feared others have perished.

Twenty-five scrolls of the law, more than 600 years old, have been burned since the attack began.

(By the Associated Press)
Clashes between Jews and Arabs and British troops are reported in Jerusalem and various portions of northern Palestine as British forces by land and air today continued their work of attempting to restore order after a week of trouble between Jews and Arabs.

The principal danger seems to be past the British Colonial office officially announced, and the situation in both Palestine and Transjordan continues "quiet," according to the office. The announcement admitted, however, there was fear of further trouble as Arabs were reported crossing the Syrian frontier into Palestine Friday morning.

Airplanes, the office said, had been sent to check the advance and British troops were being rushed to that sector to prevent a possible attack. British planes are patrolling south Palestine.

An American rabbi and his wife are reported to have been killed in the ancient Galilean city of Safed where an outbreak, officially described as "small," was suppressed by troops.

The Moslem sabbath yesterday, expected to be productive of renewed outbreaks throughout the country, was extremely quiet. Disarming of the population of Palestine continues, though it is reported the Jews resist being disarmed by troops unless safety from attack by Moslems is assured.

Coxey's Army Heading To Washington Again

WARREN, Ohio, Aug. 28.—"General Jacob Sechler Coxey has mobilized again. The vanguard of his 'army' moved across Ohio today on the way to Washington in the interest of 'money at cost and non-interest-bearing bonds,' his panacea for unemployment and economic depression.

Coxey startled the country and wound up in jail years ago when he led a crowd of footsore unemployed to Washington. He and some of his followers stepped on the capital lawn before their cause was presented to government officials, and they were thrown in jail. The army dispersed, Coxey was released, and "Coxey's army" became nothing but a colloquialism in American speech.

To this campaign, however, Coxey goes better prepared. The wealthy Massillon, Ohio, crusader who retired from the profits of a sand and gravel industry rides in a luxurious limousine with his daughter, Ruth Patricia Coxey, former Ziegfeld show girl. Their car is followed by trucks loaded with a tent for his meetings, an individual lighting plant, and literature on his plan to relieve the country by issuing non-interesting bonds for improvements providing jobs for unemployed without cost to tax payers. In 1914, Coxey's second army stumbled and halted at the eastern mountain ranges. This year he hopes to collect a following equipped with automobiles. Washington will be reached at the end of a 100 day campaign.

"Thank You" Sign Would Mark Road Courtesies

COVENTRY, Eng., August 31.—In an attempt to encourage "road courtesy," a motorist, G. Eastwood, is planning to place on the market a luminous signal which, when the driver of a car presses a button on his dashboard, would read "Thank you."

Eastwood's idea is that the signal will enable drivers of luxurious cars to express their appreciation of the courtesy of the common - truck - driver - species who might happen to draw over to the side of the road and signal to the man in back of him to overtake and pass him.

National Guard Ordered On Duty In Strike Area

Action Follows Rioting As Peace Officers Forced To Disperse.

TO MAKE ARRESTS

Officers Swear Out Warrants for More Than Hundred Strikers.

MARION, N. C., August 31.—(AP)—Armed with 138 warrants all charging inciting to riot, sheriff's deputies today began a hunt for the men and women who last night drove officers out of Clinchfield mills village with clubs and stones.

The trouble is an outgrowth of the strike at the mills and resulted in four companies of the National Guard being sent here. The streets of the mill village are being patrolled by the militia as court attaches continue the work of serving the warrants, one of them, Alfred E. Korman, southern organizer for the United Textile Workers, an organization affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Before noon today officers had jailed 38 men and one woman on charges of participating in the riots in the Clinchfield mill village last night.

Those taken in custody were immediately placed in the McDowell county jail where they will be held, pending hearing.

Deputy sheriff Claud Robbins was the only officer to receive a major injury in the clash and he was able to be on the job today, assisting in the round up of the rioters.

Cruel Officials Thwart Family In Bootlegging

LAS CRUCES, N. M., August 31.—Prohibition officers apparently are going to break up the family trade of bootlegging in the Baldonado family.

Antonio Baldonado was arrested and charged with possession of a sale of intoxicants. His stepfather was in custody at the time charged with violating the customs laws by smuggling liquor across the border. His mother was out on bond awaiting action of the September term of federal court on a bootlegging charge. Tony's brother was arrested and charged with possessing 40 gallons of pure alcohol, 135 pints of whiskey, 24 quarts of rye, and a quantity of wine.

Pennsylvania Farmers Still Barter Produce

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., Aug. 30.—Barter still is a much used form of business transaction in many Pennsylvania districts, and there are many farmers earning a good livelihood who see comparatively little cash in a year.

Butter and eggs are their stock in trade, with vegetables likewise are exchanged for groceries, wearing apparel and other articles.

There are stores in the smaller towns and cities catering particularly to this class of trade, where the custom of a quarter century ago of giving "due bills" still prevails.

The "due bills" are credit slips, and the hired man, in years gone by, was paid with "due bills" at the end of the month. Today he demands and receives cash, and if the farmer is insistent he can obtain cash from the stores with which he deals, instead of the "due bills."

Boll Weevils Will Get Fat If This Kind of Production Becomes Stylish

The average cotton farmer will cheerfully admit that for a number of years past southwest Arkansas has been a paradise for boll weevil—and instead of getting rid of the pest it now begins to appear as if we're inviting more of them to come in and visit for hope now presents twin cotton bolls. As if there were not already enough bolls on a stalk to satisfy the weevil tribe.

MODIES of the MOMENT

The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY © 1929 BY NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Molly Burnham, who has more suitors than she knows what to do with, agrees to a trial engagement with Bob Newton, the widowed husband of her dearest friend. The engagement is to be a secret, but Bob proceeds to tell the world.
Then newspaper reporters come to storm Molly's flat because she is both beautiful and famous. Two of her plays are running in New York, and her new book, Ashes of Desire, heads the list of best sellers. The publicity upsets Molly dreadfully, particularly because Jack Wells happens to be in town. Jack is the only man whom Molly has ever loved. Her engagement to Bob is a mere expedient matter and took place after Jack had declined quite flatly to marry her.
Upon the advice of Red Flynn, a reporter, Molly takes Rita, who is Bob's daughter, and goes to Lenox, to seek seclusion. Ever since the death of little Rita's mother, Molly has had the child. Her reason for considering marriage with Bob is that she may keep the little girl always with her. Bob is alarmed at her disappearance, and goes to ask Red if he knows where Molly has gone.
New Go On With the Story CHAPTER XLVI
Bob found Red in the press room at the police court. Fortunately for Bob, there were no other newspapermen about at the time. Because Red, when aroused, delivered himself of considerable invective. Now he greeted Bob derisively. "Hello, Romeo."
"Where's Molly?" demanded Bob. "Molly? How should I know?" Red dropped his cigarette to the floor and stepped on it.
"I'm glad you dropped in, Newton," he began informally. "I've been wanting to tell you a few things. Being at Molly's, when pinning to relieve my mind, always cramped my style. Every time I had a yen to let you know what I thought of you Molly was around."
"I didn't come here to learn your valued opinion," broke in Bob angrily. "I want you to tell me where Molly has gone with my child."
"Not so fast," soother Red. And his exasperating calm infuriated his perturbed visitor. "Not so fast, Romeo."
Now, in police court circles, Red is more or less famous for origi-remotest corner of his sub-consciousness. The ugly epithets he used were applied entirely to Red, on whom he vowed a deep and dreadful vengeance.

The men who were brushing him off were newspapermen. They took the affair with a very casual air, as though they were used to finding unconscious people strewn all over the place.

"Better lay off Red," they admonished. "What chance have you got against a police court man? Naturally the boys will give him the breaks. It would be a lot of advertising that wouldn't do you any good."

Eventually he saw the wisdom of their advice. He realized that a story may be fairly presented, but with enough subtle humor to render either plaintiff or defendant absurd. Even for the sake of a verdict, he had no desire to appear ridiculous. As the reporters had said, it was natural that the newspapers should give Red a break. The inevitable conclusion would be his own presentation in the most ignoble of roles.

He was determined, however, to locate Molly, and compel the return of his child. He considered consulting a detective agency, but decided to wait for a few days. For the present, it was better that people should think Molly had gone away solely to avoid the insistence of the press.

He called one of the papers and dictated a statement.

"Regretting the exploitation of her most personal affairs Miss Burnham," he said, "has left Boston, in company with my small daughter. Neither Miss Burnham nor I have any further statement to make at this time."

Meantime the re-write men, each fortified by a copy of Ashes of Desire, were writing various "True Stories of Molly Burnham's Romance." Assuming that the book was autobiographical, they interpreted it as a message to Bob.

It was a good story. Full of heart throbs. The re-write men did not know that it was not true. There was Molly's book, from which to quote. And there were certain facts. They put two and two together.

News was scarce, and a good romance is almost as good as a murder, any day. Besides, it is not often there is such a chance for an attractive layout as Molly's pictures furnished. Molly takes a very good picture, and she had been photographed by the best portrait photographers in the country. There were pictures, too, of Rita. She is a delightful child, and has been photographed oftener, probably than any child outside of the movies.

Considering all things then, the news editors can scarcely be blamed for plugging the story for all it was worth. On the second day, the stories were more complete than on the first. They traced Molly's phenomenal success from college days. And they recounted the shooting by Dopey Dan from beginning to end. The stories of Molly's plays were told and re-told. And Ashes of Desire was reviewed in a five-column spread.

Red Flynn read the first editions. And when he had finished, he sent Molly a telegram.
It was addressed to Mrs. William Blake, Lenox, Mass. And it read: "MY SCHEME ALL WET STOP B. ON RAMPAGE STOP SUGGEST RETURN AT ONCE TO PACIFY HIM STOP NO WORD FROM J. STOP GUESS HE WENT BACK TO NEW YORK."

When Molly received this cryptic message, she threw discretion to the winds and telephoned Red at the police court.
"What's Bob ramping about?" she demanded. "Is he furious because I took Rita away?"
"That's some of it," admitted Red. "Telephone's no place for confidences, old thing. Come on home, and I'll tell you."
"Is he drinking?"

"I don't know. The truth is, Molly..." Red hesitated.
"Yes?" she prompted. "What's happened? Hurry up and tell me. I'm imagining the most awful things."

"Wait till I close the door," he admonished. "The walls have ears around this dump. Can you hear me all right, Molly?"
"Of course I can hear you. For heaven's sake, Red, don't be like that!"

"Well," he drawled, "I knocked your fiancé for a row of goals last night, Sweetness. Oh, he's all right now. Nothing to worry about. Just a little clip on the chin. Nice and clean, right out the picture."

"Red you brute! What did you do that for?"

"Little private matter," he told her solemnly. "I've been wanting to take a wallop at the guy for a long time. Last night he comes down to see me, and pretty soon he pulls a fast one."

"But you shouldn't have struck him!" she cried.

"Well, remorse isn't gnawing away at my vitals, so don't let that bother you, Sweetness. The point is, the young man's a bit riled. First off, he was going to have me arrested for assault and battery. But I guess he thought better of that one, because there haven't been any process servers invading the sanctuary of our consecrated press room."

"It's nothing to joke about!" interrupted Molly sharply. "If you've infuriated Bob, he'll simply take it out on me—that's all."

"That being that, you might as well come home. What I'm afraid of is he might get some detective agency on your trail. Then there'd be the duc of a rumpus."

"Little vengeance! You're so consoling. I guess you're right though, Excit Mrs. William Blake and entourage from Lenox. Now listen, Red," Molly's voice came eagerly over the wires. "Tell me honestly, she coaxed, haven't you seen Jack?"

"Not hide nor hair of him. I guess he's ditched you," he told her unfeelingly. "Serves you right, Molly getting yourself engaged to an Arab like Newton."

"Oh Red, be nice to me," she begged. "I'm so upset. Rita has a perfect dreadful cough, and I'm worried to death. Please be nice, just for a little while."

"All right," he promised. "Come on home, and I'll be nice. Better plan to get in some time after dark. It will give you a peaceful night, if the crowd doesn't know you're back."

It was raining when Molly reached Boston. A driving, furious storm, with the rain coming down like lim stiletos, and whirling, when it fell, in great, grey puddles. And an angry wind blew in damp wet gusts.

There was the feeling of melancholy that comes so often with rain and darkness. Molly felt engulfed in a dreadful depression that foreboded she feared more unpleasantness. She remembered the night, when she was at college, that she and Jack talked of premonitions. And she told him that she could feel disaster in her bones. He had laughed at the notion. But now she felt sure that what she said was true. She could sense catastrophe in her very marrow.

It was a calamitous night. Molly drew her coat tightly about her, and shivered.

"Is daddy going to meet us? demanded little Rita, pressing her nose to the window, as they drew into the station. "Where's daddy, mamma?"

"I don't know, dear," Molly changed the subject. "Won't it be nice to be home again, Rita? How would you like to have Natsu bring your little bed in mother's room tonight? Wouldn't you like that, dear?"

"And you'll tell me about when you were a little girl?" wheedled Rita. "And how Grandpa Burnham took you to the circus? And you ate the peanuts, and drank all the pink lemonade, and got sick as anything?"

"And the lions!" prompted Molly. "And the sea lion that ate all the fishes—dozens and dozens of them, Rita! And the elephant that carried the man in his mouth!"

Rita's eyes were sparkling. "You tell nicer stories 'n my daddy," she approved.

Molly had thought Red might be at the station, but there was nobody there to meet them. A taxi whirled them through the darkness. And Natsu, calm and unperturbed, admitted them.

"I'm not at home," she told him. "Not to anybody, Natsu."

He bowed gravely. "My lady has had many callers."

"Yes—well, I don't want to see any of them. And Natsu, please move Miss Rita's bed into my room."

Molly chided herself for her fears. They were quite childish, really. She had an absurd notion that Bob would try to kidnap Rita from her nursery. It was better that the child should remain with her.

"And, Natsu, be sure you lock the doors very securely tonight." (To be continued)

Texas Law Makes Good Business for Arkansas

TEXARKANA, Aug. 28.—(P)—The Texas law which went into effect last June 12 requiring a three-day notice to be filed by persons intent on matrimony, has produced a land-office business for the two marrying couples on the Arkansas side, Justice G. M. Orr and J. S. Draper.
In proportion as "business" has increased on the Arkansas side, issuance of marriage licenses has fallen off in counties of northeast Texas.

issuance of marriage licenses in 50 per cent behind the volume a year ago, and clerks of several other counties have reported an even greater decrease.

From June 12, when the Texas law went into effect, until Aug. 1, 152 marriage licenses were issued in Miller county (Arkansas). Of these 72 were issued to Texas couples. In the same period in 1928, 89 licenses were issued in Miller county, of which 29 were Texas couples.

In addition, many Louisiana couples who formerly went into Texas to be married to escape the strict Louisiana law, are now coming to Texarkana, Ark.

Both Justices Orr and Draper have smashed their records for tying knots in July and the first part of August, and both expressed confidence in the outlook for a greater business during the fall, and especially around Christmas time.

How Ed McCorkle Lost Golf Match

J. A. Livingston Recalls
Golfers Finally Matched
Coins for Cup.

Maurice Chevalier
in the Paramount Picture
"Innocents of Paris"

The following is from the Russellville Courier-Democrat, edited by J. A. Livingston.

The first annual golf tournament in the Arkansas Press Association was played at the annual convention of the editors at Fayetteville in June. The editor of the Courier-Democrat, regarded by members of his home club as a very ordinary player when in his best strides and absolutely hopeless when slightly off his game, entered the tournament. Believe it or not, we outlucked some of the editors who ordinarily play a much better game than we do, and when the scores were hung up we were in a tie for low score with Ed McCorkle of Hope, who is a real golfer, but did not play up to his usual form at Fayetteville and also had a much smaller handicap than the C-D man.

The cup was offered by the Western Newspaper Union and the general state manager, Clarence B. Smith, parleyed with members of the tournament committee for weeks and consulted many golf authorities as to the proper procedure in awarding the cup in case of a tie. And here's where the C-D man again outlucked his opponent. We suggested to the committee that the tie be played off by the toss of a coin offering to take "heads" and let our opponent or some disinterested third party do the tossing. The coin turned heads two time in three, and the cup was delivered.

PERSONAL MENTION

"Tommy" Thomson, popular new coach of the Arkansas University Razorbacks, was in Hope Friday night, driving up from Dallas, where he has been attending Knute Rockne's coaching school. Jack Robison, one of Thomson's local proteges, accompanied the Porkie mentor and will spend a few days here with relatives before returning to Fayetteville. Coach Thomson proceeded on to Little Rock, where tonight he will attend a banquet to be held in honor of Rockne. Notre Dame's peerless football professor.

Miss Mary Belle Schooley, who has been enjoying her vacation with her parents in Hope, returned today to Chicago. Miss Schooley is with the Scott Stores Corporation there.

Mrs. James H. McGinnis and little daughter, Martha Ann, left yesterday for their home in Memphis after spending several days with her parents. Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Moore, she was accompanied home by her sister Miss Lillian Moore, who was on her way to Jackson, Miss., where she has accepted a position as instructor in the school of Occupational Therapy.

Mrs. W. D. Leonard and two daughters, Ruth and Jeanette, of Long Beach, Calif., and Mrs. A. B. Leonard and small son Arlice Jr., arrived in Hope, Friday. They will visit Mrs. Minnie Bayless sister of Mrs. Leonard. From here they will motor to Birmingham, Ala., where they will visit other relatives.

Bill Carrigan, somewhat well known around these parts, has been hidden out for the past three days and among his friends the suspicion is growing that he eased over into Texas to see if he couldn't do something toward swinging that empire back into the safe, sane, sober and respectable ranks of democracy.

An alert NEA Service cameraman snapped the picture above as a mob was rushing into the New Orleans city hall, where a riot was in progress in the council chamber, Acting Mayor Walmsley and three commissioners being attacked by irate street car strikers. A few minutes later police cleared the building with guns, clubs and tear gas bombs, five persons being sent to hospitals. Little River Club Birthday Monday

All-Day Program Arranged
At Country Club
for Labor Day.

HOPE, Aug. 31.—The Little River Country Club, one of the newest organizations in Little River county, will celebrate its first anniversary on the club grounds next Monday, September 2. This date falls on Labor day, and it being a national holiday, it is thought the event will be attended by approximately the entire membership and their families.

The past year has witnessed a rapid and substantial growth of this popular cutting place, and its members are becoming more enthusiastic every day. A number of beautiful and substantial cottages have been built by the members, and new construction is started every week. During the past few days, contracts have been let for two cottages. Mr. F. Ray McGraw, of Shreveport, president of the Standard Pipe Line Co., let the contract last week for a beautiful log cabin to be erected on the grounds. It will be of unique design with hardwood floors, and all modern conveniences. Mr. O. O. Lumpkin, of Walsh-Lumpkin Wholesale Drug Co., of Texarkana, also has a cottage under construction. Among those completed during the past week are the cottages of Mrs. Roland W. Rogers of Texarkana, and Mrs. Joe Griffith, of Idabel.

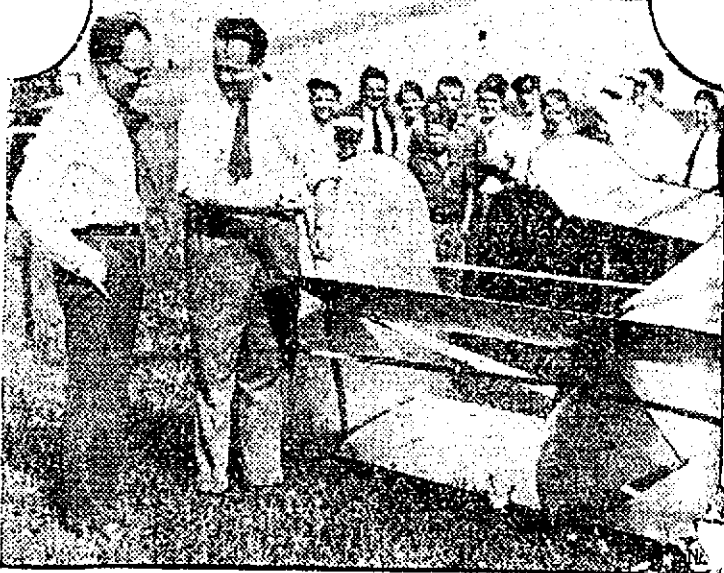

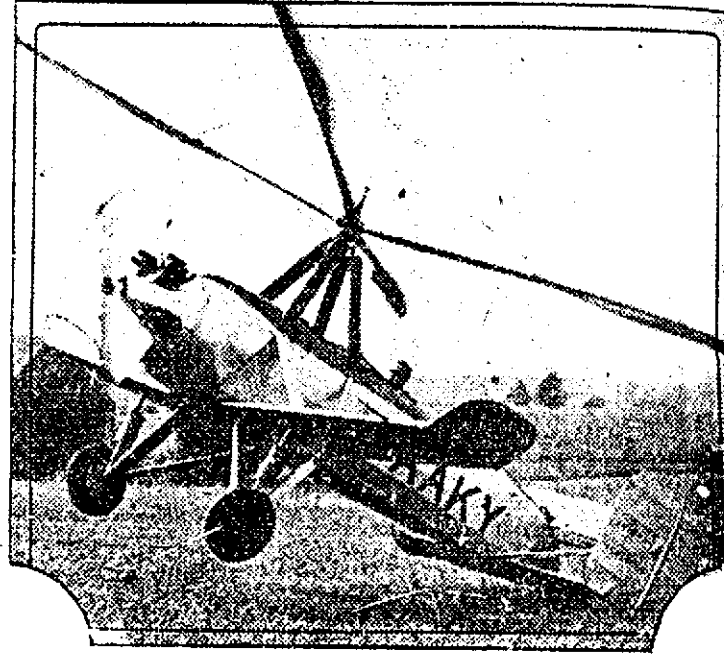

Invitations for the anniversary celebration have been mailed out to a large list of people, selected from every community within 100 miles radius, and all members of the club. Admission to the grounds on that day will be limited strictly to those receiving invitations, whose names will be checked at the gate, and to those invited by the members. All guests invited by the members must be accompanied by the one inviting them, or present at the gate a written invitation signed by a member. This rule was decided upon in order to keep the crowd limited to the capacity of the grounds.

Among the entertainment features for the day will be a golf tournament, "square dance" in the afternoon, and a special dance in the evening. All the facilities of the club, including swimming, golf, tennis, dancing in the afternoon, boating, children's playground, etc. will be open free to all guests of the day. There will be an admission charge of $2.00 for gentlemen, ladies free, at the night dance. Morris Battle's Pirates have been secured to play during the morning and afternoon, and for the dance at night.—Foreman Sun.

Autogiro Has Its Ups and Downs

Anyone can fly this autogiro plane after eight or ten hours instruction, according to claims of its makers. The improved model, which takes off in less than half the space required by an ordinary plane, is pictured above as it landed, tail-skid first, during successful tests at Philadelphia. It descended almost vertically and rolled only a few inches after touching the ground. Note the four propeller-like blades whirling above the cockpit. Below is a close-up of the autogiro's main plan. The bottom surface of the tail is fixed, with the top acting as an elevator and equipped for tilting in starting. Juan de la Cerva, 33-year-old Spanish inventor of the craft, is shown with Harold Pitcairn, left, owner of American patent rights on the autogiro.
